

URGES UNIVERSAL TRAINING IN U. S.

Chamber of Commerce Report Calls on Nation to Prepare.

ASKS ARBITRATION IN R. R. DISPUTE

Strike Would Be "National Calamity"—Defences Must Match Policies.

(From The Tribune Bureau.)
Washington, Feb. 10.—All the military forces of the nation should be under the direct and absolute control of the Federal authorities, and no plan less complete than universal training will achieve full use of the nation's strength of men, was the unanimous opinion of business men, as expressed in the report of the special committee on national defense presented to the National Chamber of Commerce today. The report was unanimously approved later and enthusiastically applauded.

"National preparedness"—naval, military, industrial, economic and social—occupied the attention of the afternoon session, and applause after applause rang through the Pan-American Building as each speaker discussed different phases of this important question.

A resolution calling upon the railroads and their employees to settle their wage controversy by arbitration was also adopted by the chamber.

After reciting that an interruption of traffic in the United States would be "a national calamity," and if brought about through arbitrary action by either side would "constitute an act inimical to public welfare and fraught with grave consequences," the resolution declares it is the sense of the chamber that the roads and men "should and, in the interest of the public weal, must settle their differences without recourse to measures that would impair the public service."

Asks Investigation of Dispute.

A supplementary resolution provides for a committee of the chamber to investigate "such phases of this critical situation as relate to the interest of commerce and the public, and to report from time to time as to the best means of preserving the public service unimpaired."

That the next war into which the United States may unfortunately be drawn will not be of the comic opera type was the Spanish-American War was the view expressed by Howard E. Coffin, of Detroit, member of the Naval Advisory Board. He declared that the army and navy are not the cutting edge of the blade of national defense and that without mobilization of industrial and commercial resources the nation will be helpless. He declared that in the next war, as in the great conflicts of Europe, women and children will be an important part, not on the fighting line, but in the mills and factories.

Defence Report Adopted.

The report of the special committee on national defense was then presented by its chairman, Dawson Little, of Cleveland. It says in part:

"The first requirement is a council of national defense, which should perform an advisory and coordinating function. No form of national strength should be represented nor should any plans for the use of the national strength be left undeveloped.

"The navy and army should be developed in accordance with a continuing policy laid down by the council of national defense, setting under orders and advice from the President of the United States the United States, whose duty it is to determine the policy of the United States in relation to the rest of the world.

"The United States has adopted certain policies, a number of which have been referred to by the President in recent addresses. The Monroe Doctrine, the new Pan-Americanism, which marks its latest phase, excluding the United States from China, the principles of the freedom of the seas and the insurance of our proper influence in the enforcement of international law—all these policies, which are coming to be regarded as the basis of our national strength, must be able to stand up to aggression, but they may on the other hand readily provoke others to a course of offense.

"The national concern of the country must be to uphold and withstand the consequences of its policies, the first line of defense by its geography, is the navy. And, if attacked, the cheapest, most effective and safest defense by the navy can only be obtained if it is strong enough to seek out and destroy the enemy at sea and certainly at a distance from our shores sufficiently great to render invasion impracticable, and thus eliminate the alarm and consequent commercial and financial panics and loss which our country's immediate invasion of such a disaster.

"Behind the navy, and constituting the second line of defense, should be the army. A highly efficient regular army with reserves should be maintained which shall be sufficient to deter peace-time military attacks of the United States, furnish garrisons for our overseas possessions, and our heretofore defenseless first shock of war, and acting as the training school for officers of the higher ranks.

"In order to create the counsel of national defense new legislation will be needed.

"Additional legislation will be needed to strengthen the present office of naval operations into a general staff for the navy. The size of the navy should be determined by the policy of the nation in its relation to the outside world, and adequate to support this policy, whatever it may be.

Wants Industrial Staff.

"The staff of industrial mobilization should be created by new legislation and given powers to work out and submit to Congress carefully detailed plans for the use of the national economic strength in case of war.

"The functions of the staff of industrial mobilization should be to gather data to the character and quantity of materials and supplies required, the tools of industry available to produce them and the means of making these tools of industry effective through legislation, organization and training.

The term of three directors expired with the meeting, and the following were elected to fill the vacancies: Edward A. Tamm, Secretary; James R. Macmillan, Providence; W. L. Clause, Pittsburgh; E. W. McCormick, New Brunswick; N. J. A. G. McCormick, Baltimore; Homer L. Ferguson, Newport News; V. A. Smith, New York; Dr. James S. B. Anderson, Memphis; Tenn.; Charles Nagel, St. Louis; William B. Butler, Moline, Ill.; F. A. Seiberling, Akron, Ohio; L. S. Gillette, Minneapolis.

Merchants Want Pork Barred by Constitution

Washington, Feb. 10.—William G. Breed, chairman of the Merchants' Association of New York, appeared in behalf of a resolution proposed as an amendment to the Federal Constitution which the association has asked the chamber to advocate.

The resolution would have the chamber recommend "that the Constitution of the United States be amended so as to permit the President to approve or disapprove any specific items or provisions contained in any appropriation bill, to the end that he may no longer be compelled to approve items and provisions which he deems contrary to public opinion or his own judgment, in order to secure the appropriations necessary for the conduct of governmental departments and the operation of the governmental functions of the United States."

"Every one knows what the American 'pork barrel' is—few know why it is," said Mr. Breed. "The best answer is the lack of power in the chief executive to veto items in 'pork barrel' bills."

The appropriation bills for the three sessions of the 62d Congress covered an expenditure of $1,022,129,454.60, and represented upward of 100,000 items of appropriation measures in each session, many of which came to the President at the conclusion of the session. A veto of any of these bills meant a serious closing of the business of the national government.

"The President is practically powerless to prevent these abuses, which lie at the root of governmental extravagance, by reason of the fact that he can exercise no discretion in individual items, but must accept measures as a whole or reject them as a whole."

"The best evidence," argued Mr. Breed, "that the people are under the influence of a movement under discussion is shown by the fact that in thirty-five states the people have declared in constitutions which they have adopted that they wish the Executive to have the power to veto individual items of appropriation bills."

The Merchants' Association asks that the chamber authorize a referendum on the resolution to ascertain "whether we should continue a system which is unscientific and uneconomical, and which is a reflection on the wisdom of the framers of the Constitution."

Daniels Cites Franklin as Preparedness Advocate

Washington, Feb. 10.—Secretary Daniels of the Navy defended the Administration's naval increase programme and advocated the immediate building up of adequate merchant marine in a speech here today before a session of the chamber of commerce. He said that the United States decided to discuss national preparedness.

"We can no longer live unto ourselves," said Mr. Daniels. "Our farms grow more than the British Isles, our forests are richer than the world. We have the right to have a large share in clothing the world and supplying people in every clime with whatever is manufactured in our mills and factories. But how can we fill our larger mission? What avail reaping harvests and large production in factories without adequate and reasonable water transportation? The cutting of any of our commercial arteries is a dire and deadly blow to our nation, and it is so tied up with the enlarging and strengthening of our navy that the two cannot be wisely separated.

"The naval programme offered by the Administration is a constructive, progressive one, and it is built according to the continuous five-year programme—the first continuing programme ever proposed by an Administration. It will give us by the year 1921 thirty-three capital ships of the first line and twenty-five battle cruisers, 108 destroyers, 175 submarines and smaller craft in production."

Mr. Daniels declared himself to be a disciple of Benjamin Franklin on the question of preparedness. His "Disciple of Benjamin Franklin" declared that there never was a time when we had more to be prepared for than we have now, and that we must be prepared for the impending Revolution that any other time."

No man in the Revolutionary period could be at ease before him in his preparations for defense. His achievement for preparedness may well be studied by the people of this day and generation."
